New Studio Album - 6 Tracks

May 2020

Folk / Experimental / Ambient
Jivek Production

This album marks Kentin Jivek's return to pure songwriting. One can imagine Charles Bukowski walking along the Seine in the company of John Malkovich, talking to them about Stig Dagerman, the red super moon and a trip to Argentina for some artistic business or not. In 2020, love and its contemporary fantasies, the wind blows delicately and it is 6 p.m.

The guitars are more present than on the previous album, tinged with feminine octaves and vintage delay. The musical writer uses external digital pedals in this album with this desire to control the instruments and not just synthetic bribes.

The synthesizers are analog and expressive, the objective of this album is also to rotate several times, six tracks that draw a subliminal breath of life. After trips to Morocco, Malta, Iceland and Cyprus, the aim was the learning of the instruments that are preponderant, Kentin Jivek gives us an album in three languages and widely perceptible by a majority.
